HOW MOBILE APPS PROTECT YOUR DATA

2016 Q4 REPORT

PrivacyMeter is an independent security team focused on mobile application data security. Our privacy team continuously researches multi-platform applications and environment. We examine application data is not securely stored locally (at rest), operated in memory (in use), transferred over the network (in-transit), and available due to weak defense mechanisms. We do not break any applications and are not looking for common software vulnerabilities. Instead, we perform our tests by making an environment insecure. It helps us to identify weak chains in application to simulate situations when an application is not able to protect its data. In contrast to other companies, we are not looking for simple data leakages based only on data fit with in-app API methods that gives a wide and non-transparent results but on the exact fit of the data item with a security level that shows the quality of data protection mechanisms implemented by developers. Many security scanner tools and techniques to check if data stored or transferred without protection fail to distinguish the set of non-protected data items comparing to the rest application code, as well as detecting the secure mechanisms has nothing with its quality. Our approach helps to obtain enough data find out all data items and clarify the quality of protection to understand if it is better or worse protected than it is supposed to be.

I. SECURITY AND PRIVACY IN A MOBILE APPLICATIONS WORLD

Mobile applications have not only become daily things of our lives; they have also become a part of XXI culture. Corporate IT and security professionals have same needs with typical customers who manage personal information only. To understand a security, users should keep in mind what happens with their OS, applications, and its data and divide risks into vulnerability and privacy group. The first group refers to actions that break either application or OS. It usually designed to rare involve any user actions to break security mechanisms and get access to user data. The second group refers to privacy issues and describes cases when data stored or transmitted insecurely.

Developers ignore the data protection until they faced something or someone who makes them implement a protection, as it should be designed. Developer's privacy policies describe how much every developer cares about data, protect everything and assure users his app provides 100% guarantees. Many security companies develop their risky applications to show customers how much good their data protected. They use (or develop their own) automatic scanners to analyze application code and provide an auto-generated report. No one of them can clearly say what data items protected and how bad that protection is. In other words, should user worry about non-protected HTTP connection if he does not know what data transferred over it? The downloading news might be acceptable; transmitting device information, geolocation data and credentials over the network in plaintext is not acceptable. Same to out-of-date OS. Is previous version so bad to worry to rush into an update or not? How many user data items was consumed by third party services like Google/Flurry analytics? The last question is usually how much money user data does worth? The price of 'home' software starts from $30 include VAT; average price is $500 up to $3000 for special software. The highest price is available on the market is $20,000 for forensics software that gives access to thousands of devices and million data items. The saddest part of this story is 'Speed-to-market' idea that helps them to grab data from thousand applications improperly protected, especially, if customers use same data among more than one applications and have at least one bad protected application. More same data shared between applications and more applications you use, the higher risk of data leakage customers obtains eventually.

A new set of security challenges has been already raised. To answer this call, PrivacyMeter Team has been examining many applications to have the opportunity make results widely useful and available for IT and security professionals as well as non-technical customers to stay informed about app insecurity. The goal is integrating and introducing security, data privacy compliance to mobile application development and management. It helps to educate customers with useful security and privacy behavior mindset. Spreading information in different ways such as bulletins, EMM integrated monitoring service, or simple reports is a way to solve insecurity issues and help to reduce risks when using mobile applications.

THE PURPOSE OF THIS REPORT

The purpose of this report and our research, in general, is widely spreading results on mobile application data protection for IT and security professionals as well as non-technical customers to stay informed about managing mobile application ecosystem. Our results are not limited to enterprise only who manages EMM solutions. Instead, any mobile customer who use modern mobile OS, such as Android and iOS, can apply all information presented in this report. Comparing to other reports on mobile security topic, we do not present results of automated code scanners, high-level risks with 'no-clue' details, vulnerabilities lists downloaded from known sources (CWE, NVD, etc.) and filtered by the name of mobile applications and mobile OS. In our report we share only useful results about applications' data items in the way of transparency: credentials, financial or travel information, what protection level was assigned and why we do, what user actions may lead to data leakage and how to avoid it. It helps to answer the questions like

PrivacyMeter

1. if your password is good protected by application A, worse protected by application B and not protected by application C; in turn, it helps to decide if you want to keep installed application C or uninstall it,
2. how many your data items were found in different parts of application code and if it is protected in the same manner or some part better/worse protected than others were. In turn, it helps to decide if you are should use application everywhere without risks or it follows some limits in usage like application preconfiguring in trust network and place only,
3. either application installed on iOS protects your data better than same application installed on Android, or vice versa, etc.

Answering questions has become more important to answer the key question if it is worth to protect one group of data items and do not protect another one. In other words, how much the data costs and if it is worth to protect data.

THE LIMITS OF THIS RESEARCH

Preparing this report, we narrowed our search by following criteria of OS, data protection concepts, and metrics.

First, we examined popular applications for mobile operation systems iOS and Android. All applications were installed from official applications markets AppStore and GooglePlay and were updated up to the latest version by the middle of October 2016¹. The new application releases might be available due to application development circle². Operations system are up-to-date too. However, we put some explanations for older OS releases to highlight what privacy issues it may bring if the mobile device is not updated yet.

Second, the scope of data concepts narrowed to data items that stored locally (known as Data-at-Rest) and transmitted over the Internet (known as Data-in-Transit)³. According to our findings since 2014, most of the applications is not properly protected these data concepts and percentage of possibly leaked data from these sources is almost 90% or higher. It means the developers are ignoring and implementing security guides in a wrong manner; on another side, it gives wide opportunities to intercept customer's data with breaking into application code or using vulnerabilities.

¹ Unfortunately, we cannot put all news versions into reports, so if there is a new version available in Application Market, do not forget to check our web-site, social networks or new channels where we keep

² Applications might not available in some countries; the latest application release might be published first for country A than B and so on.

³ The entire application data, either local or network, are encrypted with up-to-day and strong encryption. This allows data stored or transferred by the application safer and prevents malware and rogue applications from accessing data

Third, protection level's points divided into two groups system and own protection points. System protection points assign if an operation system provides a security mechanism that works without implementation or could be managed by the user. Own protection points assign if a security mechanism belongs to the developer (developed by him) or belong to OS but implemented by the developer. Additionally, own points assign for third party libraries added by the developer into his application. These libraries may have the same levels or a different one. The Environmental (Env) and Raw App levels are average levels per each application depending on a group (Env → System, Raw → Own). The Raw App level reflects the app protection level only without considering OS and how much effort developers into protection techniques put. Additionally, Raw Level helps to compare directly application data items. The Env App level reflects the app protection level considering default protected and up-to-date OS⁴. This estimation needs to show the difference between expected level and real level considering the security mechanisms' implementation fails and vulnerabilities that break the implementations and so on. Although we do not define improper data protection as vulnerabilities, there are several IDs that describes it (Sensitive data leakage known as CWE-200, Unsafe sensitive data storage known as CWE-312, Unsafe sensitive data transmission known as CWE-319).

This report includes the research results about application data insecurity in the scope of the proposed methods, tools, categorizing the analyzed data and data list, considering the data protection concept and evaluation metrics. To perform this research, we use real credentials and examine real data associated with account and services like banking, hotel, social, shopping services, etc. This report is not and does not contain

- either a guide or a to-do list how to analyze and pentest mobile application data,
- either a guide or a to-do list how to use the pentesting tools,
- any raw values of data were analyzed (like real credentials or financial information), any code snippets, local or network dumps, any auto-scanner reports and so on,
- any other information that should not be revealed by many reasons such as EULA, Privacy Policy, etc.,
- any information about permissions requested by an application as well as malware or spyware,
- any information applications from Alternative App Markets, however, all results presented in this report is applied to identical applications distributed via Alternative App Markets, except repackaged spyware and Trojans.

⁴ This report does not contain results about every possible improperly OS-protected case but provide information how to recalculate it

DATA PROTECTION COSTS

Talking about data protection costs, we will define costs through the price value of software solutions for data access, data acquisition, data intercepting, etc. These categories of software solutions are non-special (home), professional, special (forensics, pentesting); the price of feature capabilities limit each of them.

List of software to perform security checks referred to mentioned groups include but not limited:

- Device drivers and inbuilt tools
- File viewers,
- Dump and backup viewers,
- Online services and tools for calculations,
- Network debugger and pentesting tools
- Virtual OS solutions (VMware, Genymotion, DDMS, etc.)
- File and code tools – debuggers, disassemblers, decompilers, activity tracers, and pentesting frameworks
- Forensics and special pentesting solutions

This list is not one we recommend to use or rely on it to perform 'breaking into data' activities and using many tools from this list should meet license and EULA compliance at first. This wide list of software categories that might be applied to perform an attack on the device or data. Some of them are free to use, and others are required a paid license. Software costs and software features with it limits help to refine the costs of customer's data and might be a strength indicator of protection level (score points). In further chapters, we will define and explain protections levels, but here we want to put a short table to show our vision on how the strength of protection bound to the data acquisitions software. This table is not full and is not supposed to be market research. The goal of that table is to give highlight the difference between weak and strong protection. As you can find many issues have grown from the simplest attacks and a lack of protection; the average costs of software applied to direct data access is not higher than $1000.

TABLE 1. LIST OF SOFTWARE PRICES AND STRENGTH OF PROTECTION

Software Category	Example of Software	Key Features	Price	Protection Level	Protection Explanation
File viewers	SQLite, plist, text, hex, XML, etc.		Free or paid	Non-Protected	Data 'as is' and easily accessed (plaintext, no protection at all)

PrivacyMeter

				Obesity Protected	Extra data found that shouldn't be accessed
				Medium Protected	Data available if it's allowed only and may require user action
				Interim Protected	Data is not available all the time or partially accessed
Debuggers, disassemblers, decompilers, activity tracers, and pentesting frameworks	MobSF, IntroSpy, Drozer, IDA, Dexter, etc.	Typical reverse engineering activity	Free or paid	Good Protected	Protection and privacy issues are still possible but might involve interaction with an app code
File and Device Access	Macroplant Software / iExplorer, iMazing, etc.	Providing access to device, files, and backups	Home ~$100 Enterprise $300+

II. SUMMARY FINDINGS

This chapter describes two poll results and summary of our findings. Summary includes two charts with averages values over 250 applications and one more chart about different applications that have at least one non-protected item.

POLLS

We had launched two polls the purpose of those was to find an attitude of different categories of people to the data protection and security. Both polls involved more than 50 people in total.

The first poll is called "Customer Data" still available by shorten URLs <http://goo.gl/9WF2dC> and has a description was "There are many data types stored, transferred and operated by your mobile application. Some of them are worse or better protected than others were. What is the most important data to you?" There was only one question "What data should be protected in your opinion?" with multiple choices.

Here are results of this poll (64 responses):

- How many mobile applications you have installed on your device?
- Do you use same data (credentials, financial, etc.) among different applications?
- Is the device rooted or Jailbroken?

SUMMARY

Below we presented the summary of our results 250 applications (135 iOS apps and 115 Android apps) we examined. Almost each application for iOS has a couple for Android except singles applications. All applications were picked up from 20+ most popular application categories (17 unique categories over iOS and Android altogether).

All summaries divided into groups by following criteria (Figure 1, Figure 2):

- Environmental and Raw level estimations
- OS – iOS and Android
- Average protection level estimations – combined, Data-in-Transit (DIT) and Data-at-Rest (DAR)

PrivacyMeter

Below (Figure 3) presented a chart of applications that have at least one worst item among other items. The bars are omitted either related to 0 points (Raw only case; means non-protected at all) or depend on OS (Env and Raw cases; iOS only or Android only applications)

PrivacyMeter

Many applications presented on Figure 3 mainly good protect its data, however, contain at least data item that is not protected at all. List of data groups and items presented below refers to Figure 3 and include 30 non-unique records and 8 data groups:

- Account Information (Account Details, GEO and Address Data)
- Contact Information: (GEO, Profile, Social, Media URLs, Place Details, Stream)
- Analytics 'n' Ads Information (Device Data and Environment)
- Credentials Information (Credentials IDs and Passwords)
- Events Information (Stream)
- Location 'n' Maps Information (GEO and Address Data, Media Data, Messages, Place Details)
- Loyalty Information (Account Data, GEO and Address Data, Place Details)
- Media Information (Place Details)

Analyzing data protection without the OS impact, developers might not have good solutions to secure the user data. The quantity of unique applications without data encryption of local and network data shows the difference between the developer's effort put to protect the customer data. Almost the third of applications have data items (at least one) are not protected over Internet and networks. However, almost every application has data items (at least one) are not protected while storing it locally. It highlights that developers rely on sandbox more than encryption.

Meanwhile, only 20-30% of applications have data items (at least one) are best protected by own implemented encryption solutions like VPN or offline data encryption.

We found a significant difference between the app developer's effort in data protection (Raw) and an average effort of app developer and OS vendor (Env.). So, the quantity of worst protected data items is low per the Env. level and quite high per the Raw level. This cases for both operation systems and separately for iOS and Android shows that many developers rely on OS protection more than themselves. However, comparing best-protected data items we can found that the responsible developers put more effort in data protection comparing to the vendor.

III. DETAILED FINDINGS

In this research, we include 250 applications and 8124 data items in total. Among them 135 iOS applications and 4287 data items, 115 Android applications and 3837 data items.

We do not provide any average results filtered by application categories because many similar applications assigned to different categories by the developers. For example, Twitter is a well-known social network is assigned to “News” category or several taxi applications are assigned to Utilities, Travel, Transportation, and Business categories.

DATA GROUPS ITEMS

Every application’s level with its data group’s level and data item’s level are limited to the range 0 – 9 points.

Comparing both figures on average protection, we do not find a slight difference between protection results of different data groups. All differences mainly refer to developers like Apple, Microsoft, Facebook, Twitter or higher quantity of well-protected applications, while many other companies, especially who recently grown from startups spend less attention on the security. The higher quantity of good applications is meant to be a higher quantity of applications not related to the company directly but related to application categories like an office or task/flow managers.

List of data groups' and its protection levels show average protection results over group data items and the difference between Vendor protection mechanisms and developers mechanisms that both impact on data protection in whole. This difference important to highlight if developer relies on Vendor (Apple, Google) protection only, if he provides better or comparable protection of certain data if he cares about protection in any mean of this word. The difference is here being the difference of Env. Level, which one is Vendor' protection, and Raw Level, which one is Developer's protection. Note, many Raw levels presented here for 'iOS Data-at-Rest' case are assigned to 'Good Protected' Level (6 points). It means data stored out of backup files, but not all data we found here were additionally protected as we expected. However, we did not assign same protection level for Android case for reasons explained above. It explains the huge difference between protection data on iOS devices and Android devices on comparing the local data's level protection. However, comparing overall, data of iOS applications is slightly better protected than of Android applications from the viewpoint of the difference between Env Level and Raw Level values.

FIGURE 12. DATA GROUPS' OVERALL PROTECTION. ANDROID. DATA-IN-TRANSIT

We do not do any conclusions for data groups' protection levels here because group level is average level and it does not represent the 'group' in common meaning. As mentioned earlier, the 'group' is a place where data was found. In other words, same data may be found in more than one place or data may be found in non-typical place even, e.g. the 'Geodata' was found only in part of code that refers to Weather activity, not in common groups like location, not even in travel, orders or somewhere else. Another example, device data often transferred in various requests like Analytics & Ads group, Credentials, in-app analytics, cloud synchronization and so on. So, if data item like Device data or Geodata is not protected in a good manner but were found in different places, it might decrease overall group level. Therefore, we provide lists of pairs 'group + data' divided by level into several sections.

Raw protections level values presented below is useful to education purpose and the case when the device is rooted or jailbroken too.

PrivacyMeter
DATA ITEMS

All 8124 data items we examined over 250 applications (135 iOS and 115 Android) we divided into several groups depending on its protection score. The worst group refers to the less than three points, the bad group refers to the less than five and more than three points, the good group refers to the less than seven and more than five points, and best group refers to the more than seven points. Each group is equally applied to data items or application. As each application have data items referred to several groups and many application have installed in the device, some applications might provide different protection to the same data items comparing to other applications. Thus, it is possible to define a list of data items combined into groups and find out what applications fall into each group.

Each percentage value here means that there are X % applications that have data items protected referred to the group.

The 27.41% of 135 iOS applications have data items protected worse than others were. Every iOS application has data items that protected weaker than others were. Almost every iOS application has many good protected data items. Third of iOS applications provide excellent protection.

The 20.74% of 115 Android applications have data items protected worse than others were. Every Android application has data items that protected weaker than others were. A quarter of Android applications has many good protected data items. Only 17.78% of Android applications provide excellent protection.

In this report, we defined 122 data items and discovered 105 of them over 250 applications, 20+ application groups merged to 17 and 462 pairs (combinations) of data groups plus data items. Either 105 data items or 462 pairs data items can be assumed as 100% to define the quantity of data items related to certain group (worst, bad, good, best). A percentage value shows how much your data might be stolen if you have installed all applications. The application protection level was chosen by the average value of the score based on Env. criteria to show

Previous results referred to the applications that contain worst or good protected data items. Below we provide overall levels over all 250 applications divided by level into several sections. Detailed results are provided in the chapter “FULL LIST OF PROTECTED DATA AND RELATED APPLICATIONS”.

The idea of research is not only checking how much app developer cares about user data but also defining worst and best app and data items.

We remind that we assume the following limit about data-at-rest protection: more points for storing data out of backup files is applied to iOS only; this case is not defined for Android due to a lack of support from vendor and developers side⁵, so we assume here no additional points. Also, there is iOS specific item called screen snapshots that taken automatically on application switching event (switching between applications). This item is always stored out of the backup file and stored in two states either ‘as is’ (snapshot data is available, and many include sensitive data) or application splash screen (no snapshot data is available for that application). The first case is assigned to Good Protection level; the second is to Extra Protected

List of applications are equally worst from Raw and Env protection level viewpoint means the applications earn less three points overall and have too many worst items (item’s level as well). Overall application level and overall item’s level are average values of DAR and DIT items.

TABLE 2. WORST IOS APPLICATIONS (ENV. AND RAW LEVEL CRITERIA)

App Name	Env. App Protection Level	Raw App Protection Level
AppCompass	2,38	0,75
Cris Taxi Bucuresti	1,85	0,46
Fixtaxi (Aerotaxi)	2,55	1,43
Meridian Taxi	2,81	1,77
Skyscanner	2,98	1,94
Taxi 777	2,36	1,09
Velobike	1,75	0,50

TABLE 3. WORST ANDROID APPLICATIONS (ENV. AND RAW LEVEL CRITERIA)

AlterGeo	1,80	0,25
Cinemagia	2,05	1,47
Fixtaxi (Aerotaxi)	1,75	0,00
Meridian Taxi	2,31	0,62

⁵ Android developers do not usually use the backup features and these features are turned off by default comparing to iOS developers where developers decide where to store and how it impacts on backup feature per each application

App Name	Env. App Protection Level	Raw App Protection Level
Skyscanner	2,74	1,48
Taxi 777	2,14	0,76
Velobike	1,44	0,00
Weather Street Style	1,69	0,00

List of applications are worst from Raw protection level viewpoint only means the applications might earn more than three points overall but still have many worst Raw items (item's level is less than three points as well). Overall application level and overall item's level are average values of DAR and DIT items.

IV. METHODOLOGY

A detailed description of the research methodology includes the following parts:

- research conditions,
- vulnerabilities
- application selection criteria,
- list of OS and device models,
- application market list,
- data protection concepts and OS implementation,
- system and own, environmental and raw protection levels and explanation,
- a group of data items,
- list of data items,
- list of tools,
- list of examined applications

RESEARCH CONDITIONS

Applications were tested under the following conditions:

- if access to local data items requires a root or jailbreak, this action was applied, and it does not decrease the system protection level;
- if access to local data items requires only access to backup copy, no root or jailbreak actions were applied;
- if data transmits over the Internet without protection both own and system level values were set to 0, because there is no way to protect data in this case (no feature implemented in iOS) except the using custom firmware that prevents using non-protected communication or the using VPN (it increases only system level value);
- if the data examination requires the interception techniques, these actions were applied; if application prevents interception based on MITM attacks and validate its requests to the server, then fake security profiles and certificate were installed into OS. Expected results are preventing this case from using OS mechanisms or having own developed;
- own protection techniques were not mixed with system one; it helps to distinguish the cases of lack of developer's protection techniques implementation. In other words, if developer relies on sandbox only, it should not be assigned many points comparing to another who implements additional protection layer;
- quality and quantity of protection techniques impact on points earned by application per each data items of that application. It means, if the same data were found with worse protection level at least once, then the data item protection level is minimum level among all protection levels referred to that data item;

RELATED VULNERABILITIES

We do not define a lack of data protection as vulnerabilities. However, there are several defined vulnerability IDs referred to improper protection mechanisms:

- Sensitive data leakage [CWE-200]
- Unsafe sensitive data storage [CWE-312]
- Unsafe sensitive data transmission [CWE-319]

Sensitive data leakage [CWE-200]

Sensitive data leakage can be either inadvertent or side channel. Legitimate applications usage of device information and authentication credentials can be poorly implemented thereby exposing this sensitive data to third parties.

- Location
- Owner ID info: name, number, device ID
- Authentication credentials
- Authorization tokens

Unsafe sensitive data storage [CWE-312]

Mobile applications often store sensitive data such as banking and payment system PIN numbers, credit card numbers, or online service passwords. Sensitive data should always be stored encrypted so that attackers cannot simply retrieve this data off the file system. It should be noted that storing sensitive data without encryption on removable media such as a micro SD card is especially risky.

Unsafe sensitive data transmission [CWE-319]

It is important that sensitive data be encrypted in transmission lest it be eavesdropped by attackers. Mobile devices are especially susceptible because they use wireless communications exclusively and often public Wi-Fi, which is known to be insecure. SSL is one of the best ways to secure sensitive data in transit. If the app implements SSL, it could still fall victim to a downgrade attack if it allows degrading HTTPS to HTTP. Another way SSL could be compromised is if the app does not fail on invalid certificates. This would enable that a man-in-the-middle attack.

All these vulnerabilities cover our results for improper data protection.

APPLICATION SELECTION CRITERIA

In general, we are looking for different applications from various categories. However, there are several criteria how we pick up applications for research purposes.

- an application is available in the official application for download and has official page market depends on OS,
- an application is ranked out of first 200 applications inside the category,
- a web registration or in-app registration is available to start to use this application,
- a web registration or in-app registration is full or party available and requires to receive additional packages in the office or via post mail like loyalty or bank cards,
- application content is free or paid and available for wide customers (not locked for enterprise only),
- the application is not in the 'trash', game, malware or over-privileged categories are excluded,
- all alternative applications (not official) for popular services are excluded,
- all branded applications, such as Asus Browser, PolarOffice for LG, etc., are excluded

PrivacyMeter

Therefore, it helps to narrow our research to many popular applications but not limited to the 'Top 10 Apps' only. Usually, we pick up 10-15 applications from each category. Also, branded applications, such as Asus Browser, PolarOffice for LG, etc. And we limit the scope of applications by official applications only (no alternative applications are included in this report).

LIST OF OS AND DEVICE MODELS

All chosen applications were examined for the following operation systems and device models:

- Android v5 – v6 for a wide range of devices Samsung, Asus, Huawei, etc.
- iOS v8 – v9 for iPhone
- iOS v8 – v9 for iPad

We exclude from this report all information about recently released OS results, such as iOS 10, Android 7. Many developers are updating their applications since new OS releases were announced. Therefore, we decided to postpone our results for new OS releases to winter 2017 to let all developers do all changes need to be added to their applications.

APPLICATION MARKET LIST

As mentioned earlier, we only count on official Application Markets: GooglePlay for Android, AppStore for iOS. However, all results presented in this report is applied to identical applications distributed via Alternative App Markets, except repackaged malware, spyware, and Trojans.

IMPLEMENTATION OF DATA PROTECTION CONCEPTS

Data protection concepts are well known for many years, and recent five years two concepts have become most popular – DAR, DIT concepts. Below we provide a list of them with an explanation and description how these concepts were implemented in modern operation systems. We do not pretend to the detailed description of that implementation, but we only want to highlight key characteristics from the viewpoint of customer use cases related to these concepts.

TABLE 14. DATA PROTECTION CONCEPTS

Data Protection Concept	Abbr.	Explanation
Data-at-Rest	DAR	Locally stored data on internet or external storage. Data might divide into several parts, full data, backup data, and containerized data
Data-in-Transit	DIT	Data transmitted over the Internet and local wireless network (as part of solid internet connection) and limited by it
Data-in-Use	DIU	Referred to data operated in internal memory (not storage) and application code, like hardcoded values

DIU (Data-in-Use) was excluded from results unless it is necessary needs to highlight developer's pros and cons.

We made a quick investigation how these data concepts work in different operation system and presented our results below:

TABLE 15. IMPLEMENTATION OF DATA PROTECTION CONCEPTS

	Data-at-Rest	Data-in-Use	Data-in-Transit

LIST OF PROTECTION MECHANISMS

The protection level's points are divided into two groups system and own protection points. System protection points assign if an operation system provides a security mechanism that works without implementation or could be managed by the user. Own protection points assign if a security mechanism belongs to the developer (developed by him) or belong to OS but implemented by the developer. Additionally, own points assign for third party libraries added by the developer into his application. These libraries may have the same levels or a different one. The Environmental (Env)

⁶ <http://www.oxygen-forensic.com/en/events/news>

and Raw App levels are average levels per each application depending on a group (Env → System, Raw → Own). The Raw App level reflects the app protection level only without considering OS and how much effort developers into protection techniques put. Additionally, Raw Level helps to compare directly application data items. The Env App level reflects the app protection level considering default protected and up-to-date OS. This estimation needs to show the difference between expected level and real level considering the security mechanisms' implementation fails, and vulnerabilities that break the implementations and so on.

The same metrics apply to the data item's protection level values and reflects how data protected in details. Average level values (Env, Raw) do not reflect directly the same meanings comparing with detailed level per each item, except a case when all data items have the same level protection. Average level indicates a central tendency and the fact that app data items might have different protections values that impact on overall security level by increasing or decreasing it. The explanation changes depending on data protection concept and if it is either system protection level or own protection level. Usually, each next protection level means that application or OS can protect data from attacks of the previous level. Below we provide full explanation and evaluation approach.

First, general (average) explanation presented below

TABLE 16. COMMON PROTECTION LEVELS

Ranking	Protected Type	Explanation
0	Non-Protected	Data 'as is' and easily accessed (plaintext, no protection at all)
1	Encode Protected	Plaintext data is encoded but still 'as is' and easily accessed
2	Weak Protected	Developer and vendor mistakes, no user action required
3	Obesity Protected	Extra data found that shouldn't be accessed
4	Medium Protected	Data available if it's allowed only and may require user action
5	Interim Protected	Data is not available all the time or partially accessed
6	Good Protected	Protection and privacy issues are still possible but might involve interaction with an app code
7	Strong Protected	Compliance but there are publicly known techniques to access the data including forensics one
8	Extra Protected	Takes time to break, no public techniques to access are known
9	Best Protected	This type of data not exists and can't be accessed

Applying system protection metrics for Android and iOS we got several pairs (level – OS version) described below (excluding DIU):

TABLE 20. DATA-AT-REST (DAR) PROTECTION LEVELS. IOS AND ANDROID CASE

Protected Type	DAR: iOS	DAR: Android
Non-Protected	Data protection is not available or broken Applied to Jailbroken devices	Data stored on external drives like SD cards or public folders Applied to all devices Data protection is not available or broken Applied to rooted devices

Protected Type	DAR: iOS	DAR: Android
Encode Protected	Storing in compressed or encoded files but still in plaintext (zip, base64, etc.) Applied to all iOS devices, e.g. storing data in plist files	Storing in compressed or encoded files but still in plaintext (zip, base64, etc.) Applied to all Android devices, e.g. storing data in base64 encoding format
Weak Protected	Access to the application data folder is allowed on Non-Jailbroken Device running iOS < 8.3 (CVE-2015-1087: TaiG Jailbreak Team) Applied to Stock non-jailbroken devices	Not defined
Obesity Protected	Not defined	Not defined
Medium Protected	Application data items are available for sharing, if developer granted it, via iTunes Applied to all iOS devices	Not defined Due to many changes in Android and lack of support from developer's community we don't define it
Interim Protected	Data access is limited by time, e.g. storing in cache folders that are wiped from time to time Applied to all iOS devices	Data access is limited by time, e.g. storing in cache folders that are wiped from time to time Applied to all Android devices
Good Protected	Not defined Not applied because of lack of information about jailbreak tools and techniques that give access to data without wiping a device	Data is sandboxed and can be accessed via root, but root/unlocking bootloader is possible without wiping device data Applied to Android devices with unlocked or non-locked, such as Samsung, LG, etc. Up-to-date news is on http://www.oxygen-forensic.com/en/events/news
Strong Protected	Data is sandbox and can be accessed with a jailbreak only but not possible without wiping device data Applied to Stock non-jailbroken devices	Data is sandbox and can be accessed with a root only but not possible without wiping device data Applied to Stock non-rooted devices with locked bootloader
Extra Protected	No public tools for a jailbreak are available Applied to all iOS devices that are out of a 'jailbreak list'	No public tools for a root are available Applied to all Android devices that are out of a 'root list'
Best Protected	Not defined	Not defined

Among hundred applications we analyzed, we found out the following things only for iOS most happened

- Non-Protected case is applied to jailbroken devices
- Weak Protected case is applied to iOS versions older than 8.3
- Medium Protected case is wide applied but rarely found even for Office & Business applications
- Strong Protected case is applied as a typical case for stock devices
- Extra Protected case is applied to different iOS builds depending on availability of jailbreak tools; from month to month it becomes more popular case

Encoded Protected case is applied to all iOS devices depending on the way how file stored (defined by the developer), but this case is impractical for our metrics except the case of devices. It helps to distinguish plaintext data and encoded plaintext data comparing 0th and first levels. It is also applied to stock devices by default, but ‘Strong Protected’ is the seventh level and gives more points than the first level. Same to the Interim Protected case. The Good Protected case was not officially known but reserved as a possible one. Obesity Protected and Best Protected cases are just reserved for iOS for future updates. Therefore, we assume the Strong Protected DAR case for a device running up-to-date iOS (ver. 8.3+).

Among hundred applications we analyzed, we found out the following things only for Android most happened

- Non-Protected case is applied to rooted devices, public folders, and SD cards; however, some data may be stored protected even on SD cards (but per the state-of-art of mobile forensics, it is a risky case)
- Good Protected case is applied to several devices released by Android vendors, such as Samsung, LG, that are known a way to root without wiping data. Now it covers the devices with unlocked or non-locked bootloaders.
- Strong Protected case is applied as a typical case for stock devices except those are part of Good Protected case
- Extra Protected case is applied to different Android builds depending on availability of root tools

Encoded Protected case is applied to all Android devices depending on the way how file stored (defined by the developer), but this case is impractical for our metrics except the case of devices. It helps to distinguish plaintext data and encoded plaintext data comparing 0th and first levels. It is also applied to stock devices by default, but ‘Strong Protected’ is the seventh level and gives more points than the first level. Same to the Interim Protected case. Medium Protected case is not known officially for Android and reserved for further needs. The Weak Protected, Obesity Protected, and Best Protected cases are just reserved for future updates. Therefore, we assume the Strong Protected DAR case for a device running up-to-date Android (ver. 5+).

Interim Protected	Not defined iOS applications always use the system channel/tunnel to work over network even if an alternative one provided (except VPN)	Android applications rely on system channel/tunnel to communicate over networks, but official known application settings have a higher priority Applied to all modern Android devices (Android 5+)
Good Protected	Not defined	Not defined
Strong Protected	Not defined	Not defined
Extra Protected	System and user VPN Applied to all iOS devices (iOS ver.9+ Apple provides access to a system VPN)	System and user VPN Applied to all Android devices (Android ver.5+ Google provides a VPN SDK)
Best Protected	Not defined	Not defined

Among hundred applications we analyzed, we found out the following things only for iOS most happened

- Non-Protected case is applied to jailbroken devices, devices with custom firmware, non-protected data (that data is not supposed to be protected, so no way to protect by OS), or preinstalled crafted certificates
- Weak Protected case is applied to iOS with out-of-date or stolen certificates
- Medium Protected case is a stock case for iOS devices (SSL validation works; developers build applications relying on it)
- Extra Protected case is applied to different iOS that provide system VPN (iOS builds that are older than ver. 9 didn't provide an official way to use VPN)

Encoded Protected case is applied to all iOS devices depending on the way how file transferred (defined by the developer), but this case is impractical for our metrics except the case of devices. It helps to distinguish plaintext data and encoded plaintext data comparing 0th and first levels. It is also applied to stock devices by default, but 'Strong Protected' is the seventh level and gives more points than the first level. Obesity Protected case is not known officially for iOS and thus reserved for further needs. The Interim Protected case is not possible; it helps developers do not care about communications settings but providing alternative setups for communication channels might help to bypass standardized pentesting tools. The Good Protected case was not officially known but reserved as a possible one. It was found for other OS, such as BlackBerry 10 and the beta release of Windows 10 Mobile. The Strong Protected case was not officially and publicly known but reserved as a possible one, e.g. to extend a case of BlackBerry and Windows Mobile. The Best Protected cases are just reserved for iOS for future updates. Therefore, we assume the Medium Protected DIT case for a device running up-to-date iOS (ver. 9+).

Among hundred applications we analyzed, we found out the following things only for Android most happened

- Non-Protected case is applied to rooted devices, devices with custom firmware, non-protected data (that data is not supposed to be protected, so no way to protect by OS), or preinstalled crafted certificates
- Weak Protected case is applied to Android with out-of-date or stolen certificates
- Medium Protected case is a stock case for Android devices (SSL validation works, developers build applications relying on it), but the typical case is the next one (Interim Protected)
- Interim Protected case is a typical one applied to stock Android devices and supposed to highlight a feature that provides alternative setups to work over networks; it helps to bypass standardized pentesting tools by some reasons
- Extra Protected case is applied to different Android that provides system VPN (Android builds that are older than ver. 9 didn't provide an official way to use VPN)

Encoded Protected case is applied to all Android devices depending on the way how file transferred (defined by the developer), but this case is impractical for our metrics except the case of devices. It helps to distinguish plaintext data and encoded plaintext data comparing 0th and first levels. It is also applied to stock devices by default, but 'Strong Protected' is the seventh level and gives more points than the first level. Obesity Protected case is not known officially for Android and thus reserved for further needs. The Strong Protected case was not officially and publicly known but reserved as a possible one, e.g. to extend a case of BlackBerry and Windows Mobile. The Best Protected cases are just reserved for Android for future updates. Therefore, we assume the Interim Protected DIT case for a device running up-to-date Android (ver. 5+).

Additionally, any vulnerabilities offered by the vendor (Apple, Google) to an implementation by the developer is related not to the system level but to the own protection decreasing the level by one reason. From a customer viewpoint, the customer uses applications running on OS and protection mechanisms should affect each other to increase overall protection level. Unfortunately, security pro is who only interested in considering details to find out why overall security level is low. Typical customers expect to use reliable applications that offer trusted communication and data protection. Every developer who implements any solutions (own, system, or third party) should perform security tests before releasing his applications directly or indirectly with the help of third-party security teams. An average level, either system or own, is a level referred to attacks that do not involve any special security skills and can be easily detected for security holes. Many vulnerabilities have existed for years until the vendor fixed it. Developers should rely on vendor-standardized solutions but should be limited by it. For example, there was a vulnerability related to SSL validation issues, such as CVE-2015-5824 that prevented developers from implementing correct flows of checking if the network is trusted or not, was known for a long time. Some applications gain a higher protection level after it was fixed, while other applications had a higher level before it. Therefore, from a customer viewpoint, the second category of applications is more reliable than the first one.

LIST OF DATA GROUPS

In our research, we defined the following 35 data groups presented below. These data groups were used to describe a place group which data item belongs to it. It is not typical grouping by similarity, but it indicates where data items were found. For example, if data item, such “Credentials – Password”, was found in the application, this item may belong not only to Credential data group but also to the “Application Settings” data group, “Log Information: group and so on. Same for other data items, many of them may be stored in log files, many times data items may be duplicated and appears in different places. Sometimes, same data items sent to server per each request, e.g. “device information’ data item were sent per each credential request and was found in other requests too.

CONCLUSION

PrivacyMeter is an independent security team focused on mobile application data security. Our privacy team continuously researches multi-platform applications and environment. We examine application data is not securely stored locally (at rest), operated in memory (in use), transferred over the network (in-transit), and available due to weak defense mechanisms. We do not break any applications and are not looking for common software vulnerabilities. Instead, we perform our tests by making an environment insecure. It helps us to identify weak chains in application to simulate situations when an application is not able to protect its data. In contrast to other companies, we are not looking for simple data leakages based only on data fit with in-app API methods that gives a wide and non-transparent results but on the exact fit of the data item with a security level that shows the quality of data protection mechanisms implemented by developers. Many security scanner tools and techniques to check if data stored or transferred without protection fail to distinguish the set of non-protected data items comparing to the rest application code, as well as detecting the secure mechanisms has nothing with its quality. Our approach helps to obtain enough data find out all data items and clarify the quality of protection to understand if it is better or worse protected than it is supposed to be.

Key results from our quarter (Autumn) 2016 Mobile Application Data Protection Report:

- Risky applications store locally and transmit over networks data very insecure
- Almost every application requires the internet connect
- Young applications usually have worse protection than old applications
- Even old applications might have protection issues, and it requires a continuous protection tracking
- Applications updates (new releases) do not usually mean fewer issues and more security; sometimes it means worse security than in a previous release
- Applications released by the same vendor usually have the same protection issues even if these applications are not obviously related to the same vendor
- A third of applications have at least one data item that is not protected
- A third of applications have at least one data item that is best-protected item in compliance with all security guides, metrics, and advice
- Every application has at least one data item that average protected (bad protected in our terms)
- Many data items can be extracted without help from user side or with a little help by using the most simple and cheaper software

Application and OS specific results from our quarter (Autumn) 2016 Mobile Application Data Protection Report:

- Both iOS and Android operation systems provide the same level of protection that developers may rely on. However, there is a difference in data sharing mechanisms and ways to establish network connections that increase or decrease security points in our opinion
- The outdated OS might have security issues that break the app developer's implementation of security mechanisms if developers rely on the system mechanisms only and not implement their own

PrivacyMeter

- There are techniques and commercial software that gives an opportunity to root an Android and get access to the data and de-root it back if a device does not have a locked bootloader or have already unlocked the bootloader, else the customer data will be wiped due to the unlocking process. There is no one known similar public techniques for modern iOS to get access in this way; everything wipes the customer data
- Average protection level of data items among all applications mentioned in this report is not much differed from each other; this case shows the need to know what exactly happens with data items (how it is protected) and what data items are part of application (what is protected)
- Many applications would have issues with protection media, geo-based and device data items that are usually leaking without any protection if application good protected even
- Many applications duplicate data items very often and sometimes duplicates may have a different protection level. It is very risky because it might be impossible not to use certain part of application
- Almost every application has analytics third party libraries that collect and transmit data about devices, sometimes geodata, rarely booking information
- There are complex issues over several applications when the same data items appear in other applications, such as credentials from the online services appear in emails as a confirmation of registration on the services, giving an access to third party services to the one application extending usability and power of feature list of that application, or using same data items over several applications like bank credit cards, credentials and etc.

In this report, we presented the summary and detailed results of 250 applications (135 iOS apps and 115 Android apps) we examined for modern operation systems - iOS v8 – v9 for iPhone and iPad, Android v5 – v6 for a wide range of devices Samsung, Asus, Huawei, etc. Almost each application for iOS has a couple for Android except singles applications. All applications were picked up from 20+ most popular application categories (17 unique categories over iOS and Android altogether) and download from official application markets. GooglePlay for Android, AppStore for iOS. However, all results presented in this report is applied to identical applications distributed via Alternative App Markets, except repackaged malware, spyware, and Trojans.

Known vulnerability IDs define all data protection issues in this report referred to improper protection mechanisms, Sensitive data leakage [CWE-200], Unsafe sensitive data storage [CWE-312], Unsafe sensitive data transmission [CWE-319].

In this research, we include 250 applications and 8124 data items in total. Among them 135 iOS applications and 4287 data items, 115 Android applications and 3837 data items. In fact, we defined the following 35 data groups and 122 data items. In total, we found 31 data group and 105 items out of 122 among all 250 applications we examined. Pair “data group” + “data item” represents a unique data item key by itself to show how many times same data items appeared in the application. We found in total 462 pairs of “data group” + “data items” over 250 applications.

This chapter includes full detailed results of our research and includes the following categories

WORST PROTECTED DATA ITEMS (IOS APPLICATIONS)

List of worst protected data items (iOS applications, Env. Level criteria) presented here to highlight how many applications do not have protections mechanisms at all. All data items of these applications earned less than three points overall. Summary of table's results for network and locally stored data. It was found 37 iOS applications over 135 all iOS applications have issues with network and locally stored data, among them:

- 42 unique Data-in-Transit and Data-at-Rest items over 105 unique data items in this report and out of 122 defined items in total, among them:
 - 37 Data-in-Transit items
 - 11 Data-at-Rest items
- 95 unique pairs of "data group" + "data items" over 462 pairs in this report, among them:
 - 89 Data-in-Transit items
 - 12 Data-at-Rest items

List of good protected data items (iOS applications, Env. Level criteria) presented here is to highlight how many applications have good protections mechanisms correctly implemented. All data items of these applications earned less than seven points but more than five points overall. Summary of table's results for network and locally stored data. It was found 131 iOS applications over 135 all iOS applications have with issues network and locally stored data, among them:

- 86 unique Data-in-Transit and Data-at-Rest items over 105 data items in this report and out of 122 defined items in total, among them:
 - 66 Data-in-Transit item
 - 74 Data-at-Rest items
- 283 unique pairs of “data group” + “data items” over unique 462 pairs in this report, among them:
 - 135 Data-in-Transit items
 - 241 Data-at-Rest items
